

GENZ TRIES TO BRAIN HIS DEATH WATCH.

With One Hand Free, He Brings the Handcuffed One Down on the Keeper's Head.

Connolly Nearly Knocked Senseless and the Murderer Dances as He Sees the Blood Flow.

FINALLY OVERPOWERED AND BOUND.

Genz Had Refused to Obey the Jail Regulations and Was in a Most Ugly Mood—To Be Shackled Henceforth.

Genz, who is to be hanged on July 10 for the murder of his sweetheart, Clara Ann, in Hoboken, in August, 1894, made a desperate attempt to brain one of his watch yesterday afternoon in the Hudson County Jail.

Genz, since his admission into the jail, has given the officials there considerable trouble. Twice he has attempted suicide, by leaping from an upper corridor, by dashing his hands through a pane of glass and endeavoring to sever the wrist of his watch. Since then Genz has been kept handcuffed, only being unlocked when at his meals. His disposition, always ugly, has been rendered more so by the handcuffs. Yesterday Genz was particularly ugly; still, Keeper William Connolly, who was on watch, felt no apprehension when at 2 p. m. he unlocked the prisoner, and the murderer's left wrist was ordered Genz to accompany him to the watch room for his weekly scrub. In trip to complying with the orders to scrubbers the watch, Genz slipped out of his handcuffs and threw himself on his cot, where he lay for some time. The murderer's first "come along!" command was to the bar then he turned to lead the way to a cry of "broom," as he did so, Genz, lifting his right arm, sprang for the keeper, who was at the door, to which was attached a small wooden stool, high above his head, and Genz, with a crash on the head of the keeper, cutting a deep groove along the forehead and the forehead.

Wife Either Jumped or Was Thrown from the Third Story After a Quarrel With Her Husband.

Paterson, N. J., July 5.—Mrs. William Luckmann fell, or was thrown, from a third story window of her house, at the corner of Grand and Pine streets, last night. Neighbors say that there was a conflict and loud and angry voices were heard in the Luckmann apartments just before the woman fell. The crash of the glass was heard at a great distance, and it seemed as though the woman was forced through the window. She sustained a fracture of the right hip and severe internal injuries, but may recover.

When John Lammey, Luckmann's half brother, heard of the occurrence, he rushed upstairs, broke into the room where Luckmann was and attacked him. The two were covered with blood when the police arrived and placed Luckmann under arrest.

Mrs. Luckmann tells conflicting stories of the occurrence. At first she said that she had been locked in and jumped from the window because she feared a beating. Later she declared that Lammey and her husband were fighting, and that she jumped to the ground rather than witness the battle.

STARVED, HE WENT INSANE.

Labored Out of Work, Becomes Deranged Over Lack of Food and Worry—Family Also Famine.

Newark, N. J., July 5.—Michael Meckless, a laborer, thirty-two years old, of No. 66 Union street, was taken to the insane asylum from the Third Precinct Station today. Meckless, who is a steady and industrious workman, lived with his wife and four children at the above address. He had been out of employment for a long time and he and his family were barely kept from starving by the charity of neighbors.

Lack of nourishment, together with the worry to which Meckless was subjected, caused his mind to give way, and on Friday he began to act queerly. His wife watched him closely, but yesterday he became violent, and she called in the police. Police Surgeon Clark, who examined him, stated that his derangement was of a temporary character, due to hunger and worry.

Captain McManus sent a neighboring restaurant and got a suitable meal for Meckless. He then had Mrs. Meckless and her four children sent to the same restaurant, and the proprietor was given instructions to give them anything they wanted to eat. The officer who accompanied them said he never saw human beings eat so ravenously in his life. Mrs. Meckless was also provided with a little money to carry herself and children over until to-morrow.

HELD UP AND SHOT BY TWO MASKED MEN.

One Highwayman Pushes a Revolver into the Face of Their Victim and Fires.

Was About to Throw Up His Hands, Only the Robber Mistook His Movement.

TEETH SHOT OUT AND THROAT TORN.

Robbers Flee and the Wounded Man Drags Himself to a Farmer's House—Police Discredit the Story for a Poor Reason.

Paterson, N. J., July 5.—Herman Kerns was brought to the General Hospital late last night suffering from a pistol shot wound in his throat from which, it is thought, he cannot recover. He had, so he says, been held up and shot by masked men.

Kerns is a slightly built silk weaver, and has been boarding with Farmer Kinney, at Fairview, just across the Passaic River, in Bergen County. He was returning to his home last night and had reached the Fifth avenue bridge, which is in an isolated and lonely spot. He had walked half way across the structure when he was suddenly confronted by two masked men, one a giant in stature.

The big fellow thrust a revolver under Kerns's nose and cried: "Hold up your hands!"

The silk weaver, who weighs only 98 pounds, was so badly frightened that he jumped backward, the highwaymen following closely.

"Give up, you fool, or I'll shoot you," again cried the larger of the masked men, and Kerns thought best to obey. He raised his hands quickly to allow them to search his pockets, but the highwaymen mistook the meaning of the gesture.

In the belief that his victim was about to make an effort at resistance, the tall man pushed the revolver close to his face and fired twice.

The first ball grazed the weaver's ear while the second struck him full in the mouth, knocking out several teeth, and then went downward into his throat. The larynx was terribly lacerated and the glands of the throat torn. The ball has not been located.

After the second shot the strangers fled. Kerns tried to cry out for help, but could not as his throat was choked with blood. He succeeded in staggering to a farm house on the Bergen County side of the bridge, and the farmer took the wounded man in at once, and brought him to the General Hospital in this city. His chances of recovery would be fair but for the fact that his injuries are such as to prevent him swallowing food.

The police have not obtained any clue to the identity of the highwaymen. They are in fact, inclined to scout the whole story, and look upon the case as one of attempted suicide, or of a powder party.

PARROT CRIED, "COME ON!"

Man Climbs a Tree After It and While Trying to Capture It Falls to the Ground.

Newark, N. J., July 5.—John Kurzschnkel, a butcher, thirty-eight years old, of No. 75 Fairview avenue, was walking along Green street to-day when he heard a strange voice from above cry out: "Hello! Hello!"

Looking up John saw a fine green parrot perched on one of the lower limbs of a tree in front of his house. John talked to the parrot, but the bird did not seem to understand him, for it simply cocked its head to one side and looked curiously down on the butcher.

John then decided to climb the tree and capture the parrot. As John climbed up the trunk of the tree the parrot, which had sat watching him intently, flapped its wings and hopped a limb or two higher, crying as it did so: "Come on! Come on!"

John accepted the invitation and once more got to reaching distance of the parrot, but the bird hopped to a higher limb and continued to cry: "Come on! Come on!" Although disappointed again, John would not give up the chase and he followed up after the parrot. When he had reached a height of about twenty feet above the ground he saw the parrot, a few feet above him, and evidently waiting for him. He stretched himself up on tip-toe, and while he was doing this with one hand, he made a lunge with the other to seize the bird.

But he lost his balance and fell to the sidewalk below. His rapid descent frightened the parrot, and with a paring "Come on!" he flew away and disappeared over the housetops.

The man, who lay motionless on the ground, was picked up by a number of people who took him to the German Hospital, where John reached the German Hospital the doctors found that his spine was injured and that he was probably also hurt internally.
